WOMEN Warriors

Although most people associate Hawaiian warriors primarily with men, it is surprising to know that there were a large number of elite women warriors and warrior leaders throughout the Hawaiian and Polynesian Islands.

The islands were led with a number of all-women combat regiments. It is said that women warriors and war leaders were fearless, skilled and highly respected.

In fact, Queen Keelikouli was an all-woman army defeated an all-male warrior regiment from Maui.

Queen and high Chief Keelikouli led her army of 1,000 women warriors under her command.

Women were not only skilled in the art of war, but were experts in the art of peace.
