

Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater's Annual Visit to DC

February 5, 2026

WASHINGTON (7News) — As we celebrate Black History Month, the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater is making its annual visit to Washington, D.C.

The Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater "shares the African American cultural experience through performances, training, classes, and community programs," according to its website.

The troupe's new artistic director, Alicia Graf Mack, hails from the DMV and is excited to bring the art and performance of the troupe back to the area.

"This is such a beautiful responsibility to hold in my hands. I grew up in this area, as you said, and I remember coming to performances in Baltimore and Washington, and having my dreams just enlarged and fulfilled," she said.

The troupe is performing at the Warner Theater through Feb. 8

Watch here: <https://wjla.com/news/local/alvin-ailey-american-dance-theater-returns-to-dc-black-history-month-warner-theatre-arts-entertainment-music> (6:12)